Book One

The first book in Occult Philosophy covers magic of the natural world: stones, wood, metals, herbs, etc. Agrippa discusses the ties of the four elements to everything else in the universe. He states that occult virtues can be obtained by studying the correspondences and relationships between existing things.

Book Two

The second book of Occult Philosophy delves into the magical properties of celestial bodies and numbers -- the magic of mathematics and science. Agrippa references planetary correspondences as a source of power.

Book Three

The final installment of this work covers the realm of high magic -- communing with Pagan gods, angels, and other spirits. He explains ways to communicate with these beings, and with God as well. Agrippa goes into lengthy discourse on how to create magical symbols, the construction of amulets and talismans, and the kabbalistic tree of life.

Book Four

This book appeared in Latin some thirty years after Agrippa's death. Johann Weyer, a student of Agrippa's, denounced this work to be spurious (cf. Praestigiis Daemonum, 1563).

This book quotes from and expands on certain themes in Agrippa's Third Book of occult philosophy, to create a more concise and practical synopsis of the techniques for summoning spirits.
