Phillip stared out the window as Tanq pulled off into traffic. They had gone to a doctor's appointment together and at twenty weeks, Tanq was doing well. He loved being involved in the process and he and Julisa traded appointments. They had actually gone to a couple together and it had generated a lot of eyebrow rising. There was going to be a lot more of that because he, Tanq and Julisa were going to have a civil ceremony. They knew it wasn't legal but that was what they wanted to do. He was surprised at how cool Julisa had been about everything. The past three months had been like the integration of a new family. Mostly, Tanq stayed in her own place or at Julisa's but occasionally she stayed with him. She had come home with him after the appointment to be with him and to talk to Chanel, but Chanel had made herself scarce. She didn't want to talk to Tanq until after she talked to Melissa. Melissa had been on the road for months and she and Phillip hadn't spoken.

Tanq drove away with all the thoughts of what they were planning rolling through her mind. She was actually excited. She knew she needed to explain it to her ex but it didn't matter how he felt. She had spoken to her kids and they had not seemed bothered by it. Chenise was still not thrilled and was keeping a very low profile. She knew Amara wasn't sold on the union either but she knew she had her Uncle Charles' support no matter what. She was actually giddy. The idea of them being a family had thrown her for a loop but the practice runs had actually been good. They had dinner together at least twice a week and they were all in and out of the others' homes. It had to work.

Kim was doing her best to ignore the assistant she had been assigned. But he was twenty-five and drop dead fine and made no bones about his attraction to her. Her being married didn't seem to make a bit of difference to him one way or the other. He wanted her and she was denying it to herself to but the idea of sex with him was becoming very appealing, especially since Winston Sr. was drinking more than ever.
